

ONE BIG CELEBRATION

Come to Stevens Point and Enjoy Yourself on Tuesday, July 4th—Will Have a Good Time.

A number of citizens met at the council chambers last evening to make preparations for celebrating the 4th of July in the good old fashioned way, and the meeting was organized by the election of the following permanent officers, T. L. McGlavin acting as temporary secretary:

President—F. A. Krembs.
Secretary—Geo. B. Nelson.
Treasurer—R. B. Johnson.

The committee, headed by Wm. Barager, who had been soliciting subscriptions, reported a total cash subscription of $416.17, which includes $51.99 left over from last year. The chairman was authorized to appoint a list of committees, which he did as follows:

Finance—A. E. Bourn, E. D. Glen-non, Wm. Barager, John Somers, Paul Shepreau.

Band—Wm. Barager, John Martini, I. Shaffron.

Fire Works—F. A. Krembs, Alex. Ringness, T. L. McGlavin, L. A. Krembs, Elmer Pendergrast, E. W. Neumann, G. M. Houlehan.

Sports—T. L. McGlavin, A. E. Bourn, G. M. Houlehan, A. Ringness, Otto Assmann, M. E. Bruce, R. A. Oberlatz, I. Shaffron.

Parade—H. H. Pagel, A. M. Copps, Wm. Moll, F. I. Crandall, Jos. Ciechol-inski, Meehan Pfiffner, W. B. Murat, Anton Krembs, J. S. Pipe, C. F. Hass, Henry Frank, Mrs. G. B. Clark, Mrs. T. L. McGlavin, Mrs. T. H. Hanna, Mrs. E. H. Joy, Miss Anna Park.

Advertising—A. E. Bourn, H. L. Bannister, P. Curran.

Vocal Music—E. Weber, W. B. Buck-ingham, W. J. Shumway.

The celebration will be held "up town," on the public square and Main street. Some of the South Side citi-zens contemplated giving a celebra-tion, but this plan has been withdrawn, it being understood that the doings will be held in that part of the city next year.

Body to be Brought Here.

A message received by Mrs. W. F. Cartmill from Harry Walters at Ash-land announces the death on Monday afternoon of his mother, Mrs. Ed. Wal-ters, an early day resident of Stevens Point, when the family home was near the eastern end of Clark street. The husband and father followed the call-ing of a lumber grader. Mrs. Walters' remains will arrive here on the 2:11 p. m. train tomorrow, accompanied by the son and his family and interment will follow in Union cemetery. The deceased lady was upwards of seventy years of age.

SOME WILL NOT RETURN

Closing Days of School and Social Notes Connected Therewith—Few Per-sonal Items.

Miss Aurelia O'Connell, for the past year critic teacher of Normal inter-mediate grades, will go to Mankato, Minn., in September, where she will fill a like position in the large Normal school. Miss O'Connell acted as sub-stitute for Miss Hulda Schrode, whose health is now restored and she expects to return here next fall.

Miss Clara Means, commercial teacher in the High school, left Saturday morning for her home at Hazejhurst to spend the summer vacation. She will return next fall.

Miss Ethel Smith, who has very acceptably filled the position of as-sistant science teacher in the High school for the past two years, left for her home at Rome, Ohio, last Monday morning. Miss Smith will not return here next year, a fact much regretted, not only by the pupils whom she has taught, but by many friends and acquaintances formed during her resi-dence in our city. Miss Smith is a competent teacher and an accomplished young lady and will meet with success wherever she goes.

Miss Hitchcock of the Normal faculty is enjoying a visit from her mother, who arrived the first of the week from Utica, N. Y. The ladies will return east by way of the great lakes, going from here to Duluth and there take a boat for home.

Miss MacNeas and her assistant, Miss Patterson, entertained the pupils of the deaf department in our city schools at a picnic across the river, last Thurs-day afternoon, and the outing was most thoroughly enjoyed.

Miss Eleanor Flanagan, who ex-pected to remain as head of the art de-partment at the Normal summer school, has asked Pres. Sims to relieve her from these duties because of a dis-tressing accident which befell her mother a few days ago at the family home in Clinton, Iowa. The lady fell and broke her ankle, and as the other lower limb has been practically use-less for some months, she is now almost helpless. Miss Flanagan leaves here this week for the Iowa city, but ex-pects to return in the fall.

MARRIED AT MENOMONIE

Jos. C. Heil and Miss Florence Ross Were Married Monday Morning—Now on Wedding Trip.

Jos. C. Heil and Miss Florence Ross, both of this city, were married at Menomonie, Wis., at 7 o'clock last Monday morning. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father J. B. Hauck at the Catholic church in that city. The bride and groom left at once for a visit to the Twin Cities of Minnesota, where they expect to remain for about two weeks, after which they will re-turn to Stevens Point. Those from here who attended the wedding ceremony were Mrs. Geo. Dietrich, a sister of the groom, and Earl Heil, his nephew.

The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Ross and has al-ways lived in this city with the excep-tion of intervals while engaged in teaching elsewhere. She is an accom-plished young lady, good and affable and has very many friends who will join in wishing her and her husband every blessing. The groom is the younger son of Mrs. C. Heil and has also spent all of his life in Stevens Point, except for some years while at-tending the state school at Delavan, where he became proficient in music and also learned piano tuning. He is one of the best and most highly es-teeemed young men of our city, exem-plary in every respect and also has many sincere friends. After their return Mr. Heil will commence the erection of a new residence on his lots on Clark street from which the old dwelling has just been removed.

OLSEN-STEUCK.

Ralph Olsen, one of the twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. T. Olsen, was married at 10 o'clock this morning to Miss Martha Steuck of Eau Pleine, the ceremony taking place at the bride's home about two miles south of Dancy. Henry Olsen and Miss Emma Steuck per-formed the duties of best man and bridesmaid, respectively.

Guests to the number of upwards of one hundred were present to extend felicitations to the happy pair and take part in the reception being held today. Quite a few have gone up from this city and others have come from Osh-kosh, Grand Rapids and other cities.

Mr. and Mrs. Olsen leave on this evening's St. Paul train for Milwau-kee, to spend the balance of the week there and in that vicinity. Upon their return to Stevens Point they will go to housekeeping in a newly furnished home on N. Second street, two doors north of Jas. Quinn's grocery store.

The bride is the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman F. Steuck and is a native of Eau Pleine, in which town-ship she has always resided. She is a young lady of true worth and has the sincere well wishes of scores of friends for a long and happy married life.

Ralph is engaged in the wood and coal business with his father and has long been recognized as a hustling, energetic young man and firstclass citizen.

Gets School at Rio.

Geo. M. Batty of Poynette, who completed the full course at the Nor-mal last January and has since been a student at Madison university, is spending a week among old friends in town. Mr. Batty will teach next year, having secured a school at Rio, Columbia county.

Favors Woman Suffrage.

(Communicated.)

In spite of the opposition to suffrage for women, it must be admitted by all who have taken the trouble to inform themselves on the subject, that complete suffrage for women is not only necessary, but it is only a matter of a few years when all women will be given the ballot.

I can already hear some of you well meaning but uninformed ones say, "Why do women wish to vote? What do they know about making laws, or the affairs of government? Woman's place is in the home." Yes, woman's place is in the home. There cannot be a true suffragette found who will not agree with you there. With careful investigation it will be found that where women have the franchise they are just as mindful of their household duties as other women. Where women have gone out into the world of action and affairs, they have become better mothers. Women who are free, who use their own eyes, who think their own thoughts, who live in the real world of striving, struggling, suffering humanity, are the most effective mothers living. They not only look after their own children, but are able, and do look after the community's children as well.

I say that woman suffrage is inevitable because we are being driven to it. Look where you will, you see woman taking the place of man or working side by side with him. Women are taking up what formerly were exclusively men's professions. It is now common to see lady physicians and lawyers. Some of our leading authors and magazine writers are women. With but a few exceptions women look after the education of our children. Women are all overtaking the place of men in our clerical positions. We see women telegraphers, store clerks, reporters, typewriters, editors and postoffice clerks. There are over one million girls and women employed in the factories and mills of the United States. In fact women are steadily becoming leading factors in our industrial and commercial enterprises. The progress made by women in the last sixty years is sufficient to convince us that their brain is just as far advanced as that of man. All that woman's brain requires is the environment and development.

Now, if women are to be on an equal with man in industry and commerce, why should we refuse them the same suffrage as man has? Women are being driven into our factories, therefore they should have a voice in the regulation of factories. The same rule applies to all women employees. Again, women working outside of the home as they are, will soon be, as many are today, the owners of real estate or other wealth, which must be protected by the state. Are we going to refuse her the right of casting her ballot for the officials whom she believes will honestly protect herself and prosperity? I can safely predict that within six years women will vote in Wisconsin, so I advise all you who stand in the way of righteousness and progress to prepare for the worst, which will be a cleaner national, state and municipal government.

"Mr. and Mrs. Henry Turish announce the engagement of their daughter, Marie Catherine, to Edward Hazen. The wedding date has not been set." The above from a Duluth paper will prove interesting reading to the many friends of the Turish family in Portage county. Mr. Turish is a boyhood resident of Buena Vista township and makes frequent visits here.

Jacob Monian, a former resident of this city and the owner of considerable local property, is now proprietor of the Old English Chop House at 113 Washington street, Wausau. Mr. Monian enjoys a good business in the restaurant line and is ably assisted in its management by his wife. They are especially pleased to see Stevens Pointers who visit our neighboring city.

The next annual convention of the National Educational Association will be held at San Francisco, Cal., July 8 to 14, when it is expected that Stevens Point will be represented by several of its teachers, among the number being Miss Carolyn Olson. The Soo line will give excursion rates from June 27 to July 5, good to return until Sept. 15. The price of round trip tickets ranges from $69.10 to $82.30.

The building on Main street owned by Miss Ida Glover and which has for several years been occupied as a millinery store by Mrs. Kleiner, will be thoroughly remodeled, the outside sheeted with steel, a stone basement put underneath and the stairway enclosed. Mrs. Kleiner will vacate the premises for a time at least, having rented part of the Atwell block at the corner of Main street and Strong's avenue.

Jos. F. Koshnick and family now occupy their new home at the corner of Briggs and Smith streets, moving this week from 613 Briggs street, which property is offered for sale or rent. Mr. Koshnick recently bought the corner house from Geo. W. Bigelow and during the past few months it has practically been rebuilt, modern improvements installed, handsome porches erected, etc., until now it is one of the neatest dwellings in town.

Mrs. J. L. Jensen spent part of last week at Waupaca lakes, going down to supervise necessary repairs and improvements on the family cottage, which they recently purchased from Frank Rothrock, a traveling salesman who makes his home in this city. This cottage is ideally located near the east end of the largest lake and almost opposite Loyola. Miss Julia Minnebeck was Mrs. Jensen's guest over Sunday, both ladies returning home next morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Wert returned Tuesday from a week's visit in Chicago and Milwaukee.

C. O. Duxrud of Nelsonville, former chairman of Amherst township, was a visitor to this city yesterday.

Fritz A. Krembs is spending a few days in Milwaukee, going there to visit and enjoy a much needed recreation.

Leo F. A. Hein, a student at Bradley Polytechnic Institute, Peoria, Ill., where he has been doing manual training work a couple of years, is at home for the summer vacation.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Anton C. Krembs at their home on Strong's avenue, Monday afternoon, June 19th.

Mrs. Wm. Wienholt went to Milladore last Sunday to visit among old friends and former neighbors a couple of weeks.

Misses Leila Nelson and Edith Ballard, who have been teaching at Edgar, are at their respective homes here for the summer vacation.

John and Walter Galbraith of Stanley drove to this city in their auto last Sunday and spent the day with friends, returning home the following morning.

Miss Margaret Griffin went to Milwaukee last Monday, where she may spend the summer with her sisters and brother, Mrs. P. B. Gilmore, Miss Ella and Raymond Griffin.

During the months of January, February and March there were 123 deaths in Portage county, according to statistics filed, while during the same period there were 8,046 in Wisconsin.

George, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Law, had the tips of two fingers on his right hand cut off by one of the machines at the paper mill by coming in too close contact with it, while on an errand there the other day.

Wm. F. Cooper was called to Oshkosh Tuesday morning by the illness of his sister, Mrs. Nellie Franceway of Appleton, who is expected to undergo a dangerous surgical operation. The lady will be remembered here as a girlhood resident of Stevens Point.

Postmaster D. E. Frost, who owns the large frame building at the northwest corner of Strong's avenue and Clark street, a portion of which is occupied by the Buckingham and Finch insurance agencies, is making extensive improvements on the property, including the laying of a stone foundation under the entire structure.

W. E. Atwell left for Madison in his car the last of the week to attend some of the functions incident to the closing of school at the University, and from there went over to Chicago to meet his wife and baby, who had been spending the past several weeks at the home of her brother-in-law, Dr. Semith. The Atwell family returned via auto today.

G. C. Hammond, manual training teacher in our High school during the past year, left today on a motorcycle trip to his home in Buffalo, N. Y., expecting to cover the entire distance in about one week. Mr. Hammond will return in a few weeks, intending to engage in the manufacture of mission furniture, having rented the Hoeffler building on N. Second street.

The laying of the cornerstone of St. Bronislava's church at Plover will take place at 10:30 a. m. Thursday, June 22d. Monsgr. P. Lochman, V. G. of Green Bay, will give the blessing and a number of neighboring clergymen will assist in the ceremony. It is expected that a large number of people from this city and the surrounding country will attend the services.

Dr. and Mrs. F. A. Norton are now conducting the Riverside Hotel at the corner of Water and Mill streets, recently vacated by France Sutton, who has gone to Oshkosh. The house is being remodeled and refurbished and a third story will be added to the main part, giving thirty additional sleeping rooms. The Nortons are enjoying a good business, in fact they have had applications from more regular boarders than could be accommodated.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Engler, their son Robert and niece, Miss Evelyn Callahan, of Minneapolis, spent Monday in the city, being on an auto trip to Fond du Lac, where they are today attending the High school commencement exercises, the latter young lady's sister, Miss Julia Callahan, being among the graduates. These young ladies are former residents of our city, being daughters of John J. Callahan. Miss Evelyn has spent the past year studying to become a trained nurse in St. Joseph's Hospital, Minneapolis.

CONTINENTAL BINDER

The reputation and popularity of the JOHNSTON Binder is the result of the many good, reliable features which proclaim its individuality, its meritorious construction, and its durability. The JOHNSTON Binder is all that a binder should be—light, yet at once—built almost entirely of steel. It is simply constructed—no experimental or "freakish" parts—and works perfectly in all kinds of soil and grain. Built in several sizes, with or without tongue truck.

Farmers experience great satisfaction in owning JOHNSTON machines because they are built along quality lines, are durable and economical to maintain.

JOHNSTON machines have been used on two hemispheres for over half a century. They have won the farmer's confidence and are inspiring that confidence. A wonderful record.

The JOHNSTON line includes Grain Binders, Reapers, Corn Binders, Mowers, Rakes, Tedders, Manure Spreaders, Spring and Spike Tooth Harrows, Side-Delivery Rakes, Hay Loaders, Disc and Orchard Harrows, and Land Rollers.

If you are interested in getting a machine that will give you many years of good, faithful work, buy a JOHNSTON—and be sure of results. Stop in for our new 1911 Catalog, which is profusely illustrated and goes into detail about JOHNSTON quality machines. We also have a separate book on each machine. All literature sent free.

SYNOPSIS.

Philip Cayley, accused of a crime of which he is not guilty, resigns from the army in disgrace and his affection for his friend, Lieut. Perry Hunter, turns to hatred. Cayley seeks solitude, where he perfects a flying machine. While soaring over the Arctic regions, he picks up a curiously shaped stick he had seen in the assassin's hand. Mounting again, he discovers a yacht anchored in the bay. Descending near the steamer, an Arctic explorer, he learns that the yacht is making search ashore. After Cayley departs, Jeanne finds that he had dropped a curiously-shaped stick. Captain Planck and the surviving crew of his wrecked whaler are in hiding on the coast. A giant ruffian named Roscoe, had murdered Fielding and his two companions, after the explorer had revealed the location of an enormous ledge of pure gold. Roscoe then took command of the party. It develops that the ruffian had committed the murder witnessed by Cayley. Roscoe plans to capture the yacht and escape with a big load of gold. Jeanne tells Fanshaw, owner of the yacht, about the visit of the sky-man and shows him the stick left by Cayley. Fanshaw declares that it is an Eskimo throwing stick, used to shoot darts. Tom Fanshaw returns from the searching party with a sprained ankle. Perry Hunter is found murdered and Cayley is accused of the crime but Jeanne believes him innocent. A relief party goes to find the searchers. Tom professes his love for Jeanne. She rows ashore and enters an abandoned hut, and there finds her father's diary, which discloses the explorer's suspicion of Roscoe. The ruffian returns to the hut and sees Jeanne. He is intent on murder, and when the sky-man swoops down and the ruffian flows, Jeanne gives Cayley her father's diary to read. The yacht disappears and Roscoe's plans to capture it are revealed. Jeanne's only hope is in Cayley. The seriousness of their situation becomes apparent to Jeanne and the sky-man.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

Suddenly he was flying downward, as fast as gravity and his great wings would take him. Drenched with the sweat of a sudden terror, cleaving the air so fast that the sound of its whirling rose to a scream through his taut rigging. Down he slanted, seaward a little, past the end of the great headland. Then, with the sudden exertion of all his strength, upon one lowered wing, the other flashing high like the stroke of a scimitar, in the curve of the shortest possible arc, he shot landward, pounced, checked, and alighted not far from the girl.

She had been seated upon a broken ledge of rock when he had first caught sight of her. She was in act of getting to her feet when he alighted, not a half dozen paces away.

She had been pale, but her color had come back now in a sudden surge. She was breathing unsteadily and her hands were clasped against her breast. "You—you mustn't fly like that," she said. "If you had been an eagle, the way you wheeled and came rushing down out of the sky would have terrified me. I shut my eyes in order not to see you killed."

He did not answer her at once, and she, looking intently into his face, went on. "You know it was dangerous. You thought yourself that you were going to be killed. I can see the horror of it in your eyes."

Then he got his breath. "You're safe?" he questioned unsteadily. "You were in danger, sudden danger, and in terror at it. That was what frightened me, that sudden knowledge, I came down, fearing I should be too late."

"I had a fright," she admitted; "but I don't see how you could know. I'm very sure I didn't cry out."

"No, I heard nothing, no sound at all. I just knew, and so I came to you as fast as I could. What was it that frightened you?"

"Nothing at all, I imagine. I was sitting here on the ledge, looking at that wonderful sky, and all at once I found I was growing afraid. I didn't know what it was about, at all. I suppose it was just because I was a little tired and had begun to realize that I was a long way from—home. I had come around the headland, not really to look for more firewood, but in the hope that I might happen to find a clue to where the stores are hidden; and, as I said, suddenly it seemed a long way back and I began to find myself afraid. And then, being afraid, I—well, I thought I saw something moving up there behind the rocks—something big, bigger than a man, and whitish-yellow."

His eyes followed the direction in which she had pointed, but could make out nothing in the deep, vibrant blue shadows.

"That's likely enough," he told her. "It was probably a bear. If it was, we're in luck. I'll come back by and by and go gunning for him. But first, I'm going to take you—home."

She had used the word before, but in what sense he was not entirely sure; and she had undoubtedly used it not more than half consciously. At any rate, when he said it now she flushed a little, and so did he, and their eyes, meeting, brightened suddenly.

Silently he turned away from her and began furling up his wings, and she helped him, as she had helped him that other time when he had tried to convince her that he was not a dream.

When it was done, they set out slowly, in the deepening twilight, for the hut.

"It's very good of you to walk down here with me," she said, "you who could fly."

CHAPTER XIV.

The Red-Bound Book.

By the time they had reached the headland, the whole beach before them was enveloped in the sapphire shadow of the cliff, and the little cluster of huts toward which they were trudging was hardly distinguishable. It was not until they had halved the distance that the girl made out the little plume of rose-colored smoke that floated above Philip's newly constructed chimney.

But the next instant he laid a hand upon her arm and, with the other, pointed imperatively down the beach toward the hut. "Whether you saw him before, or not," he said, with a short grim laugh, "you can see him now."

Looking where he pointed, she saw a big, yellowish-white, ungainly thing come lumbering round the corner of the hut, upon all fours.

"A bear," he said, "and a good big one. You're not to be afraid. This is really unmerited good luck."

"Aren't they dangerous, these polar bears?" she asked.

In his answering laugh she heard the ring of rising excitement. "I won't deny," he said, "that if I had my way about it, I'd have you safely shut up inside the hut before I tried conclusions with him. Give me the revolver, and take care to keep out of the line of fire. If you see a chance to slip inside the hut, do it. And don't assume that he's dead until I tell you so. These polar bears have no nerves at all. You can't shock them. They don't stop until you have put their locomotor facilities completely out of business."

She was smiling when she handed him the revolver. "Here's luck," she said. "Don't be afraid for me."

Cayley smiled, too. "Keep behind me, but not so far that you're in any danger of getting out off in case I have to dance around him a little. There he's winded us already."

Cayley turned for a last look at her. He had slipped his bundled wings from his back and laid them on the ice. He was still smiling, but somewhat ironically. "I'm half afraid he'll run away," he said, "and half afraid he won't."

The next instant all doubt on that head was set at rest. The monster hissed and came lumbering toward them, pretty rapidly, across the ice.

Cayley advanced slowly to meet him, but not in a direct line. Instead, he bore off in a curve to the left. The girl understood the maneuver instantly, and, herself, set out landward at a brisk pace, moving in the arc of a circle, parallel to his but larger, in such a way as to keep the bear, Philip and herself, as all three moved in different directions, in a straight line.

They quartered round in this way, the bear swerving in well toward Philip, until all three were in a line, about equidistant from the hut. Philip and the bear, were, perhaps, a dozen paces apart. Without turning, he called over his shoulder to her, "Now run for it—for the hut. I'll keep him amused out here."

At the sound of his voice the bear rushed him. The girl had never in her life found anything so hard to do as to obey orders now. But she did obey and was running at top speed toward the open door of the hut when she heard Cayley fire for the first time. Just as she reached it, she heard his second shot. When she turned about, panting, to observe the result of it, the two seemed to her to be at horribly close quarters. The bear, reared up on his hind legs, had just lunged forward.

He sprang back clear of the flashing, scything cut of those terrible claws. A little to the girl's surprise and considerably to her alarm, he turned and went sprinting up the beach toward the talus, at full speed, the bear wounded, but not in the least disabled, lumbering after him.

It takes a fast runner to outrun a bear, but Cayley did it. When he reached the foot of the talus, the bear was 20 paces behind him. She saw him stop short, whirl round again and face his pursuer with a shout.

The bear also checked his speed and reared up once more, towering, upon his hind legs. Then Cayley fired twice, the shots coming so closely together as to be hardly distinguishable. One or both of them took instantaneous effect. The great yellowish-white mass tottered forward, and collapsed in a heap only a pace or two from where Philip was standing.

He waved his hand at the girl, and walked back for his wings. When she met him, half way up the beach, he was carefully taking the spent shells out of his revolver, one at a time, and depositing them in his pocket. "No telling how they may prove useful," he commented; then, with a quick look into her face, "I hope you weren't frightened when you saw me run."

"I suppose I shouldn't have been, but I'll have to confess that I was. You weren't trying to get away from him, or you wouldn't have run in that direction. But it looked rather dreadful, just the same. Why did you do it?"

"We were too far down the beach, too near the water's edge before. It was too late to skin him and cut him up tonight, and I was afraid if a storm were to come up before morning, a really big storm, we might lose him. It was a lot easier to get him up the beach before I fired those last two shots than it would have been after. I thought at first of running toward the hut. It occurred to me, only just in time, that there was no use in making an abattoir of our front yard."

They had reached the hut, and as he finished speaking, they entered it. Even Philip caught his breath rather suddenly with that first glance about its transformed interior. The driftwood fire, which glowed upon the hearth, filled the whole room with light, and bathed the walls and rafters with warm colors.

Here was their fortress—against the cold and the dark; a fortress, too, against despair. That rude hearth which he had built today was to be their altar of hope.

The girl stood looking at it a moment in silence, her lips pressed tight together, one outstretched hand groping for the door-jamb behind her, as if she wanted the support of something. Even in this warm firelight she looked a little pale. By an evident effort of will she was breathing very deep and steadily. She did not try to speak.

Cayley understood well enough what it meant. This place that they had come back to for the night was home now, probably the last home she would ever have in the world, if one were to balance the chances fairly. Its warmth and light and comparative comfort did more to enforce a realization of their tragic plight than anything before had done. The thing she was fighting with was a sudden wave of plain terror.

Cayley went out into the little vestibule and closed and bolted the outer door. He contrived to waste a minute or two over the trifling task, in order to give her that moment by herself.

When he came back, closing the inner door behind him as he did so, he found that she had taken off her cap and the heavy fur coat which had encumbered her shoulders all day, and hung them upon a convenient wooden peg in the wall. She was standing near the fireplace now, warming her cold fingers at the blaze.

Cayley started a little at sight of her, for now she was transformed, too. Standing there, silhouetted against the blaze, in her gray cardigan jacket and moleskins, she looked like a young boy. He had discovered before this that there was not a grain of false modesty about her; nevertheless it pleased him when, with a certain charming frank simplicity, she called his attention to her costume.

"It's a lucky thing," she observed, "that I dressed for a scramble over the ice before coming ashore with Uncle Jerry and Mr. Scales. And lucky, too, that I didn't change back when we returned to the Aurora. I left it the second time with no other idea than of pulling about for awhile in the dinghy. I'd have done that just the same if I had dressed for dinner that night, as I usually did."

"Yes," he said. "A skirt would have been a pretty serious matter to people in our situation."

"Show me the rest of our house," she commanded presently. "This is the only room I've seen."

The subdivision of the hut was accomplished by an L-shaped partition seven feet or so from the outer wall around two sides of it. It yielded two tiny, cubical bedrooms (that was the purpose which the wooden bunk in each of them indicated); and a third room of the same width (about seven feet), but running the entire length of the side of the hut nearest the cliff. This room had evidently served for stores and for a kitchen, since part of the reconstructed fireplace projected into it. It was in this last room where the greater part of what the searchers from the Aurora had dismissed as "treasures" was accumulated.

Cayley did as the girl commanded, and showed her every nook and cupboard which the four walls of the hut contained. When they returned to the living room where the fire was, she dropped down on one of the bunks with a little sigh of fatigue.

"You've been disobeying orders," he said, looking her over with a serious sort of smile. "You've let yourself get too tired. You'll have to make up for it by being exceptionally obedient now."

As he spoke, he shook out the sleeping-bag on the bunk, behind where she was sitting.

"You're to lie down on that," he said, "until I can get supper ready; and directly after supper you're to take this bag into whichever of those bedrooms you would like for yours, and really undress and go to bed."

She assented to that after a little demur. That he had rightly guessed the degree of her fatigue was attested by the fact that when he re-entered the hut after dressing the fowl that was to provide their evening meal, he found her cuddled up upon the great sheepskin, fast asleep.

It was not until his rudimentary culinary operations were about completed, that glancing over to where she lay, he found her regarding him with a sleepy smile.

"I thought of something just as I was dropping off to sleep," she said, "a really beautiful idea. I tried to call out and tell you, but I was too sleepy. I hope I haven't lost it. It was something about—oh, I know. Don't you suppose we might find a clue to where the stores are hidden in father's journal or in the maps?"

He laid down the drumstick he had been about to bite into, and gazed at her, partly in astonishment, partly in a sort of amused dismay that the idea had not occurred to him before. "That suggestion," he said, "is worth the whole of my day's work. Of course that's the way to begin our search—the only way, and tomorrow morning—"

"Tomorrow morning! I thought the worst thing you could possibly say would be after supper. I wanted to let the duck go and begin the search now." She smiled at him. "You'll compromise, won't you, on directly after supper?"

He assented with a laugh. "If you can keep awake, but the first time I catch you nodding—"

"All right," she said, "only let's hurry with the duck." Then, a little later, "It can't be possible, can it, that we're going to eat the whole of it at one meal? It's beginning to look that way."

There was one compensation to the rudeness of their fare and the exigency of their equipment. Clearing up after dinner was an operation of extreme simplicity.

When it was completed, Philip heaped more wood on the fire, and in the glow of the crackling flames they spread out the maps and began their search.

"I believe," said Cayley, "that the journal will be worth more than the maps in this search of ours tonight. Anyway, while you work one I can work the other."

She nodded, picked up the journal and crossed over with it to another of the bunks. There she seated herself, tucked her feet up comfortably under her, tailor-fashion, and, propping her chin upon one palm, began to read. The light coming from behind her made, to Cayley's vision, a misty halo of her hair, and played softly over the cheek and the fingers that were half embedded in it.

The sight of her made it hard for him to stick to his maps. But presently he looked up with a sudden question. "Do you happen to find anything?" he began, and then broke off shortly.

Frozen her face, half-shaded as it was, he could see that what she had been reading just then was no mere description of this land upon which they had been cast away, but something far more personal to the father she had lost here.

"There's something perfectly terrifying," she said, "about father's description of this man Roscoe. Over here near the end, before the sun came back to them, he tells of going out for a walk by himself and of discovering that Roscoe was stalking him, in the hope, he thought, of discovering, in advance of the others, where the gold ledge was. In the twilight, father says, he looked, in his white bear-skins, perfectly enormous and incredible. And Philip—"

She closed the book, holding it tight in both hands, and leaning forward a little as she went on, "and Philip, his description sounds—oh, I suppose it's silly, but it sounds like the thing I thought I saw today when I was alone there on the beach, before you came flying down out of the sky. It didn't look like a bear. It wouldn't have been so dreadful if it had."

"It's possible," he said gravely, "it may have been he whom I frightened off when I came down last night. Certainly there was somebody, and that somebody may still be here on shore, though I supposed he had gone out to join in the attack on the yacht. But it's very strange, if there is any one, that we could have passed a whole day without encountering him."

The girl shivered; then, with a shake of her head as if dismissing the uncanny thought from her mind, said: "You started to ask me about something else, and I interrupted."

It took him a moment to collect his thoughts. "Oh, yes. There's something marked here on this map which I took at first for the location of the hut, but it appears now that it was marked before they built it. I wonder if, in the early pages of the journal, there was a description of any natural formation about here like a cave, or—"

She made as if to open the book, then, suddenly, changed her intention and held it out to him, instead.

"I haven't been playing fair," she said. "I wasn't really looking for anything. I was just reading stories and dreaming over them. It's his handwriting, I think, that makes it so hard to be good. It's—well, almost like hearing his voice. Won't you work the book and the maps and give me something to do—with my hands. I mean?—oh, I know I'm tired, but that doesn't matter."

Cayley's first impulse was to refuse, but it needed only one thoughtful look into her face to convince him that the kindest, as well as the wisest, thing was to do as she asked. An uncanny horror of the monstrous Roscoe and the appalling idea that he, and perhaps others of his gang, might be sharing the solitude of this frozen coast with them was plainly to be read in her eyes, and her own prescription for dispelling it was probably the best that could be thought of.

With a nod of assent, he rose and went into the storeroom, returning the next moment with an armful of heavy rope.

"In the old days of wooden ships," he said, "when they wanted to discipline a sailor, they set him to picking oakum. Next to pounding rust off the anchor, it's the dulllest job in the world. But we need some for calking up the cracks in our walls. Do you mind?"

"Mind!" she echoed. "Did you think I wanted to do embroidery?"

He showed her how the work was to be done, and in five minutes she was busily engaged at it. She had moved to another bunk, a little further from the fire, and he, with innocent artifice, had contrived that the big soft sleeping-bag should be spread out under her.

Meanwhile he plunged into a systematic search, through journal and maps, for the thing that was to spell either life or death for them.

At the end of an hour he looked up suddenly, an exclamation of triumph on his lips. But at the sight of her, it died out in a smile. She had slipped down on the sleeping-bag, her head cradled in the crook of one arm. And she was fast asleep.

CHAPTER XV.

Discoveries.

The sunlight of another crystalline day had made a path of gold across the floor and half way up the wall when Philip roused himself from what he had intended to make the merest cat-nap on one of the bunks, and with difficulty rubbed his eyes open. The savour of something good to eat was already in his nostrils.

Jeanne, with her back to him, was bending over the fire, busy with the breakfast. She heard him stirring, and looked around.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said. "I didn't mean to bang that pan down that way. I meant you to go on sleeping for hours and hours."

Looking fairly at him as he sat there on the bunk she saw his hands clutch tightly over the edge of it; saw the color go ebbing out of his face and then come surging back again. She had seen him do that once before.

"Why—what's the matter, Philip?" she asked.

"It's just the wonder of you," he said slowly; "of waking up to find you here, busy about this home of ours—as if—as if it were all true. I've been very deep asleep."

"You'd better get ready for breakfast," she said, in a tone whose matter-of-fact inflection was a little exaggerated. "It's nearly ready."

When they had finished, and while they still sat face to face across the board plank which had served them for a table, Cayley leaned forward a little and, smiling, asked a question.

"What's the secret, Jeanne? Your eyes have been shining with mystery ever since we sat down here."

She laughed. "You're much too penetrating. I didn't mean you even to dream there was a mystery to penetrate. But—well, it's time to tell you now, any way."

She, too, leaned forward a little and shook her head at him with a tantalizing air of triumph.

"You didn't find the thing you were looking for last night in father's journal—the place where they hid the stores, I mean."

"Oh, but I did!" he cried. "I only waited to give you time to eat a necessary and sensible breakfast before I spoke of it. I had it on the tip of my tongue to suggest that we set about finding it in good earnest, when I saw, in your eyes, that you had a mystery of your own."

It was evident from the look in those eyes now that she was both surprised and puzzled.

"You found it last night!" she exclaimed. "Found it in the journal, and then never went to look at it!"

FARM AND BEES

SWARM CATCHER IS SIMPLE

One Exhibited at Recent Maryland Bee Keepers' Association Meeting—Made Any Size.

At the recent meeting of the Maryland State Bee Keepers' association in Baltimore, Dr. B. N. Gates of the United States department of agriculture exhibited and described an apparatus for securing swarms. As will be seen from the illustration, it consists of a wooden box with holes in five of the sides, the sixth side being open, says the Orange Judd Farmer. Any convenient size will answer.

The box shown by Dr. Gates was about 16 inches long, 12 high and 8 wide. The holes were about an inch in diameter. At the top were two slits in which small pieces of comb filled with unsealed brood could be let down into the box and fastened so that they would not jar out. They are placed parallel with the long side of the box, so as to leave no obstruction when the bees are to be jarred out.

In the center of the bottom and the top of the box larger holes are bored for a pole to pass through.

A Simple Swarm Catcher.

Several poles of varying lengths are provided, so as to reach high or low clusters of bees. When the pole has been put in place through the box a hook is fastened to the top, so this may be hung over a limb if necessary. Preferably the edges should be bound with iron to prevent injury when the box is jarred to get the bees out.

In operation all that is necessary is to catch half a pint or more of bees in the box and let the box hang near where the bees have started to form a cluster. They will quickly assemble in the box by coming through the holes, and all that will be necessary will be to carry the box and dump the bees either into or in front of the new hive. The bees will take possession in the ordinary way.

WIRE TWISTER FOR FENCING

Spiral Shank Has Effect of Working Automatically and Swiftly—Especially Useful on Farm.

A novel form of wire twister that has the effect of being automatic in its operation has been patented by a Texas man. A spiral shank revolves as the device is drawn toward the user and does the work swiftly. This implement is especially useful in making wire fencing, where it is necessary to have a few twists at close intervals. The head of the tool slips down into the hollow handle and is normally in a retracted position. To use the implement two or more wires are seized in the jaws and the operator draws the tool toward him. The resistance offered causes the head to wind its way out of the handle with the circular motion imparted by its spiral shank, and as this happens the wire is twisted automatically. This is a very much speedier operation than the method of twisting wire with a pair of pincers by turns of the wrist.

Use of Weeds.

Weeds in many cases have been blessings in disguise. They have taught us how to cultivate the soil, and they never allow us to forget the lesson: "Solomon went by the field of the slothful and by the vineyard of the man void of understanding, and, lo, all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof."

HANDY ROTARY TURF EDGER

Revolving Wheel Makes Neat Edges to Lawn and Along Walk—Turf Can Work It.

The mere mowing of the grass is only a small part of the labor required to keep a lawn in attractive shape. The trimming of the turf along the edges of walks and flower beds is an important feature and is work that requires a certain amount of skill and experience, if done with old-fashioned tools. A New Hampshire man, however, has devised an implement that he calls the "rotary lawn edger," which enables the veriest tyro of a gardener to keep the edges of his grass neatly trimmed. The edger consists of a long handle and a sharp wheel mounted at the lower end. The wheel can be held stationary by means of a cotter pin, but under normal conditions it revolves. A step near the bottom of the handle enables the gardener to press the wheel into the turf with the foot and by running the tool along the edge of a walk the grass there can be trimmed in rapid time.

GIVE THE VEGETABLES ROOM

Probably More Garden Truck Ruined For Want of Being Thinned Than by Any Other Cause.

Do not be afraid to thin out your plants—they must not be crowded. Probably more garden stuff has been ruined for want of being thinned at the proper time than by any other cause.

However that may be, one of the most puzzling things for the beginner is to find out whether any particular vegetable should be thinned or transplanted and how far apart the plants should stand afterward.

He will get some help from the catalogues as to the distances, but whether he should transplant or thin is the kind of thing that is not in the book.

It requires a great deal of nerve to pull up and destroy the unnecessary seedling—more nerve than the amateur possesses. They say that a person never becomes a good gardener until he steals his nerve to this ruthless sacrifice.

A vegetable must have plenty of room to develop its best size and flavor and one can take no pride in small or commonplace vegetables. True it is that "the worst weed in corn is corn."

FARM NOTES

Never plant melons near squashes or pumpkins.

Let the rows run north and south; this gives the most sun exposure.

Young babies and young plants must have the right kind of food and plenty of it to make them grow.

If your plants grow tall and spindly thin them out. Do not be afraid to cut—go at them courageously.

If you keep a lot of cats, you won't have birds about the place. Birds destroy a great many insect pests.

Tomato seeds are easily preserved and if you have extra good ones pick out the best and save the seeds.

Good seed, good cultivation, good common sense are a pretty good combination, if good crops are desired.

It is a great thing to know just when a plant needs water. It is a matter that requires close observation.

Seed potatoes in the cellar may look all right on top and be badly sprouted in the bottom of barrels and bins; better investigate.

Too much water is as bad as too little, because the surplus fills up the interstices at the soil, excludes the air and smother the plants.

Root crops should be planted together, as well as vine crops, such as cucumbers, melons, etc., also tomatoes, peppers, eggplant and the like.

Two essentials are necessary for the rapid maturing of vegetables—a soil made light with sand, and rich with well rotted manure, and a wind break.

The city house wife cannot understand why the farmers are not all rich when she considers the enormous price she pays for vegetables and fruit.

A well planned garden is one that will allow as much of it as possible to be cultivated with a horse. Hoeing in the garden doesn't set well with most of us.

Their Great Value Is Most Appreciated by Those Who Have Tried Them.

"I was afflicted with Eczema in the palms of my hands and between my fingers. The treatment used gave no relief and my hands were in a dreadful condition when I was advised to try Resinol. I began with it by applying the ointment twice a day and using the Soap when bathing. This effected a cure in less than a month. I heartily recommend those excellent preparations," writes Mrs. Amy Crain, Fredonia, Ky. At all drug stores.

Willing to Support Proxy.

Albert Tiedemann, a freshman of the University of Pennsylvania, was called upon to vote for officers in a recent gathering. Not being well acquainted with the nominees, he thoughtfully hesitated before filling out his ballot.

One of the company left the room with the explanation that he would "vote by proxy."

"So will I," said Albert, and with his pencil poised above his paper, leaned over to a companion on his right and asked:

"Say, what's Proxy's first name?"

A Heartless Father.

"I need some help with my household duties," announced a woman when her husband came home the other night.

"What's the matter with our daughter?" the husband wanted to know.

"Our daughter? The idea! Why, Jim, you know she's awfully delicate, and she would die if she had to do any household work. She has her school, and—"

"And what? Her teacher's report shows that she isn't doing a bit of school work."

"But she is the star member of her basketball team, and you know she is eager to take the prize at the gymnasium contest. But that's just like a man—wanting a delicate girl to engage in rough, hard labor. Be ashamed of yourself, Jim Jenkins! You have no feeling."

"DEAF" BEGGAR COULD HEAR

Incident That Struck Householder as Being Along Slightly Humorous Lines.

"Many funny things happen in a flat during the course of a few months," said a Milwaukee flat dweller, "but one of the best things I ever saw happened yesterday."

"I was suddenly roused from my slumber by three loud knocks on the door. Jumping to my feet and into a bathrobe, I hastened to see what was wanted. I opened the door in time to see a young fellow half way up the flight to the next floor.

"Hello, there!" I yelled at him.

"He turned around, hastened back and handed out a small envelope, pointing to the inscription. I glanced at it. It was an appeal for aid because the applicant was deaf, and dumb.

"Say, I was mad enough to kick him down stairs. Then the joke struck me and I slammed the door in his face and went back to bed laughing."

The Worth of the Voice.

How wonderful is the human voice! It is indeed the organ of the soul! The intellect of man sits enthroned visibly upon his forehead and in his eye, and the heart of man is written upon his countenance. But the soul reveals itself in the voice only; as God revealed himself to the prophet of old in the still, small voice, and in the voice from the burning bush. The soul of man is audible, not visible. A sound alone betrays the flowing of the eternal fountain, invisible to man.—Longfellow: Hyperion.

Some Day Ask Your Physician

To tell you the curious story of how the mind affects the digestion of food.

I refer to the condition the mind is in, just before, at the time, or just following the taking of food.

If he has been properly educated (the majority have) he will help you understand the curious machinery of digestion.

To start you thinking on this interesting subject, I will try to lay out the plan in a general way and you can then follow into more minute details.

Pawlow (pronounce Pavloff) a famous Russian Physician and Chemist, experimenting on some dogs, cut into the tube leading from the throat to the stomach.

They were first put under chloroform or some other anaesthetic and the operation was painless. They were kept for months in very good condition.

When quite hungry some unappetizing food was placed before them and, although hunger forced them to eat, it was shown by analysis of the contents of the stomach that little if any of the digestive juices were found.

Then, in contrast, some raw meat was put where they couldn't reach it at once, and a little time allowed for the minds of the dogs to "anticipate" and create an appetite. When the food was finally given them, they devoured it ravenously and with every evidence of satisfaction. The food was passed out into a dish through the opening before it reached the stomach. It was found to be mixed with "Ptyalin" the alkaline juice of the mouth, which is important for the first step in digestion. Then an analysis was made of the contents of the stomach, into which no food had entered. It was shown that the digestive fluids of stomach were flowing freely, exactly as if the desirable food had entered.

This proved that it was not the presence of food which caused the digestive juices to flow, but the flow was caused entirely and alone as a result of the action of the mind, from "anticipation."

One dog continued to eat the food he liked for over an hour believing he was getting it into his stomach, whereas, not an ounce went there; every particle went out through the opening and yet all this time the digestive juices flowed to the stomach, prepared to quickly digest food, in response to the curious orders of the mind.

Do you pick up the lesson?

Unappetizing food, that which fails to create mental anticipation, does not cause the necessary digestive juices to flow, whereas, food that is pleasing to the sight, and hence to the mind, will cause the complicated machinery of the body to prepare in a wonderful way for its digestion.

How natural, then, to reason that one should sit down to a meal in a peaceful, happy state of mind and start off the breakfast, say, with some ripe delicious fruit, then follow with a bowl of crisp, lightly browned, thin bits of corn like Post Toasties, add a sprinkle of sugar and some good yellow cream and the attractive, appetizing picture cannot escape your eye and will produce the condition of mind which causes the digestive juices nature has hidden in mouth and stomach, to come forth and do their work.

These digestive juices can be driven back by a mind oppressed with worry, hate, anger or dislike of the disagreeable appearance of food placed before one.

Solid facts that are worthy the attention of anyone who esteems prime health and human happiness as a valuable asset in the game of life.

"There's a Reason" for saying "The Memory Lingers" when breakfast is started with POST TOASTIES.

HAD BEEN SILENT SUFFERER

Subordinate Officer the Recipient of Hints Intended for His Superior.

A sea captain's wife tells this story of a maiden woman, sister of one of the owners of the ship on which she once made a long voyage. She had very decided opinion on most matters, and she and the captain had many spirited arguments at the dinner table. The captain's wife, a meek, submissive little soul, fearing that in the heat of argument her husband might say anything to offend his august passenger, was in the habit of kicking him in the shins to hint at moderation. Nevertheless, all these reminders passed unheeded.

One day she administered a more vigorous kick than usual, and noticed an expression of pain flit across the face of the mate, who sat opposite her.

"Oh, Mr. Brown, was that your shin?" she asked.

"Yes, Mrs. Blackie," said the mate, meekly, "it's been my shin all the voyage, ma'am."—Youth's Companion.

FREED FROM SKIN DISEASE

"Our boy was born in Toronto on Oct. 13, 1903, and when three months old a slight rash appeared on his cheek. What appeared to be a water blister would form. When it broke, matter would run out, starting new blisters until his entire face, head and shoulders were a mass of scabs and you could not see a particle of clear skin. Other parts of his body were affected, but not to such an extent. We tried about every advertised remedy without avail, indeed some of them only added to his suffering and one in particular, the Remedy, almost put the infant into convulsions. The family doctor prescribed for him and told us to bathe the baby in buttermilk. This did not do any good, so we took him to a hospital. He was treated as an out-patient twice a week and he got worse, if anything. We then called in another doctor and inside of a week the boy was, to all appearances, cured and the doctor said his work was done. But the very next day it broke out as bad as ever.

"We decided that it could not be cured and must run its course and so we just kept his arms bandaged to his side to prevent his tearing his flesh. We left Toronto and shortly after our arrival in Duluth, the Cuticura Remedies were recommended. We started using them in May, 1909, and soon the cure was complete. You would not think he was the same child for Cuticura made his skin perfectly clear and he is entirely free from the skin disease. There has been no return this time. We still use only Cuticura Soap for baby's bath. Robert Mann, Proctor, Minn., May 3, 1910."

A MARVELOUS RECOVERY.

How a Chronic Invalid Regained Perfect Health.

Mrs. Ray Trusner, 39 West Third St., New Albany, Ind., says: "Kidney disease had rendered me a chronic invalid. I lay in bed unable to move hand or foot. My right limb was swollen to twice normal size. I looked the picture of death and my case puzzled the doctors. The kidney secretions were highly colored and scalded terribly. Marked improvement followed the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. In six weeks I was a well woman. My friends and relatives marvel at my recovery."

WISE BROKER.

Jiggs—That marriage broker was to get 10 per cent. of the girl's estate for arranging a match with a French marquis, but he did better than that—he took it all.

Wiggs—How?

Jiggs—Married the girl himself.

Couldn't See the Resemblance. They have been joking Assistant Treasurer James A. Matthews of the Guardian bank, on his resemblance to President Taft, and Mr. Matthews has steadily refused to be annoyed thereby. So the jokers subsided and the joke died a natural death.

Until the other night, when Mr. and Mrs. Matthews dined together with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harmon and their little daughter, when the Taft resemblance was revived. Turning to young Miss Harmon, Mr. Matthews asked whether she, too, thought he looked like the president.

Dorothy studied long and earnestly. Then she answered:

"Not in the face, Uncle Jim."—Cleveland Leader.

The Old Gag.

Miss Lillian B. Rowe, at an advertisement writers' dinner in Denver, said of the harem skirt:

"It will soon be so widely worn that the old gag, perpetrated in the '40s on men, may profitably be revived for women victims."

"Some sharper, you know, will revive the gag by advertising in the Ladies' Own—"

"Send $1 and learn how to keep your harem skirt from becoming fringed at the bottom."

"Thousands of dollars will pour in, and to each victim the sharper will reply:

The Kaiser Likes the Bible.

The kaiser is a great reader, and while he tries to keep himself abreast of current events, his favorite book is the Bible, says the London Chronicle. A well thumbed and marked copy is always by his bedside. When Mr. Roosevelt visited Berlin last year, the kaiser made him a present of a number of books. About half of them referred to theology and the others to military subjects. These two classes indicate the kaiser's own preferences.

WANTED TO SLEEP

Curious That a Tired Preacher Should Have Such Desire.

A minister speaks of the curious effect of Grape-Nuts food on him and how it has relieved him.

"You will doubtless understand how the suffering from indigestion with which I used to be troubled made my work an almost unendurable burden; and why it was that after my Sabbath duties had been performed, sleep was a stranger to my pillow till nearly daylight."

"I had to be very careful as to what I ate, and even with all my care I experienced poignant physical distress after meals, and my food never satisfied me."

"Since I began the use of Grape-Nuts the benefits I have derived from it are very definite, I no longer suffer from indigestion, and I began to improve from the time Grape-Nuts appeared on our table."

"I find that by eating a dish of this food after my Sabbath work is done, (and I always do so now) my nerves are quieted and rest and refreshing sleep are ensured me."

"I feel that I could not possibly do without Grape-Nuts food, now that I know its value. It is invariably on our table—we feel that we need it to make the meal complete and our children will eat Grape-Nuts when they cannot be persuaded to touch anything else." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Michigan.

THE LIME LIGHT

VICTIM OF AIRSHIP WRECK

He is a lawyer and was for many years an advocate in the court of appeal at Bordeaux. He was minister of justice from 1899 to 1902, has been vice-president of the senate, where he sits as senator of the Gironde, and was a former deputy. He has been decorated with the Grand Cross of the Order of the White Eagle of Russia.

The deplorable accident, which caused the 47th death from that source within three years, will not interfere with the progress of aviation in France, where already hundreds of aeroplanes are in use or ordered for the use of the French army. Rather, it will cause stringent regulations in the management of crowds at aviation meets.

GATES TELLS TRUST SECRETS

John W. Gates furnished the opening sensation in the investigation when he revealed the history of the United States Steel corporation. Present at the birth of the greatest steel manufacturing concern in the world, he described how it was the natural outcome of what he described as the refusal of Andrew Carnegie to be bound by the "gentlemen's agreements" that marked the early days of open competition in the steel business.

He told of millions lost and created almost in a breath; how the Carnegie mills, appraised at $160,000,000, were recognized as worth $320,000,000; the grim clash in the formative days, when John D. Rockefeller was dissuaded from joining in the creation of the corporation, and the manner in which others were prevented from engaging in the steel trade.

Relating how Carnegie had been forced to abandon plans for extending his steel business, Gates frankly admitted the gigantic industrial combination was formed to throttle competition, and he surprised the committee with the further information that when John D. Rockefeller had sought to enter the steel business a deal had been put through by which the Standard Oil magnate was forced to sell out for 40 cents on the dollar.

Because of the marked discrepancies in the accounts of the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company by the United States Steel corporation in the panicky days of 1907, as given by John W. Gates and Elbert H. Gary, the Stanley "Steel Trust" committee of the house decided that further light on that deal should be obtained, and that every person who had anything to do with it should be examined.

HEAD OF A BIG EXPOSITION

Charles C. Moore of San Francisco has been unanimously chosen by the board of directors of the Panama-Pacific international exposition company as the active as well as the formal head of the 1915 exposition. The question of executive leadership has been settled finally. There will be no director general of the Panama-Pacific exposition. Moore, as president, will combine the functions which have been divided in all previous world's exhibitions between a president and a director general.

The board of directors of the exposition has adopted a complete plan of organization, differing in its essential features from that of any exposition that ever has been held. The 1915 fair is to be conducted as a business proposition, organized upon the lines of a great business corporation. Moore, as executive head of the exposition, will be the one man upon whom will rest the burden of responsibility for carrying out every detail of exposition management. The appointment of all exposition officials and department heads will devolve upon him and to him every department chief will be responsible.

MEXICO'S NEW AMBASSADOR

Senor De la Barra's successor in Washington is Senor Zamacona, whose father was minister to the United States from 1878 to 1882. During the father's tenure of office the son lived with him in Washington, so that our government and the ways of things at our capital are familiar to the new minister. Zamacona is about forty-five years of age and for the past two years has been Mexico's financial representative in London. Previous to this he served as director of the international revenue of Mexico and also represented the Mexican government's interests in the Mexican Central railroad. He is a man of brains; if he has discretion in equal quantity he will prove an acceptable successor to De la Barra.

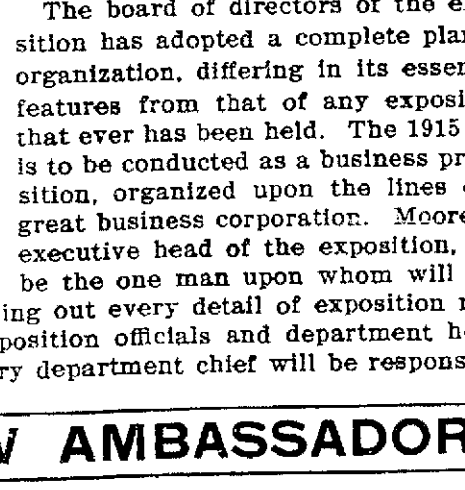

Senor de la Barra proved himself a gifted and altogether welcome representative of Mexico in Washington, doing much to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the two countries. He is an advanced thinker, thoroughly in sympathy with the advancement of civilization and the growth of popular government.

His worth was recognized when President Diaz, forced by the gathering strength of the rebellion, called him from Washington to become one of his new and modern cabinet, and especially so when both the Federalists and Insurrectos, the latter led by General Madero, chose him to serve as temporary president to succeed Diaz until an election can be held some half a year hence.

That was a terrible accident which happened in France, when a runaway aeroplane plunged into a crowd of spectators gathered to witness the start of the Paris to Madrid race for heavier than air machines, killing Minister of War Bertheaux, severely injuring Premier Monis, and quite badly wounding several others.

Premier Monis, whose portrait is shown here, was buried beneath the wreckage of the monoplane. He was taken out as quickly as possible, and examined by military surgeons, who found that he had suffered compound fractures of two bones in the right leg, that his nose was broken, his face badly contused, and that there were bruises on the breast and abdomen. Antoine Ernest Emmanuel Monis, premier and minister of the interior of France, who came into power on the fall of the Briand regime on March 1 this year, was born at Chateaufort-sur-Charente (Charente).

Tea Time In Chile. Either tea or yerba mate is served in Chile at 4 p. m., not only in the homes, but at clubs, restaurants and hotels, and many business houses. A cup of tea and a roll or small cake in the club or hotel cost from eight to twelve cents United States gold, while the business houses serve it free rather than have the clerks leave their work to go out for it.

Housework Drudgery

Housework is drudgery for the weak woman. She brushes, dusts and scrubs, or is on her feet all day attending to the many details of the household, her back aching, her temples throbbing, nerves quivering under the stress of pain, possibly dizzy feelings. Sometimes rest in bed is not refreshing, because the poor tired nerves do not permit of refreshing sleep. The real need of weak, nervous women is satisfied by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Makes Weak Women Strong and Sick Women Well.

This "Prescription" removes the cause of women's weaknesses, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures those weaknesses so peculiar to women. It tranquilizes the nerves, encourages the appetite and induces restful sleep.

Dr. Pierce is perfectly willing to let every one know what his "Favorite Prescription" contains, a complete list of ingredients on the bottle-wrapper. Do not let any unscrupulous druggist persuade you that his substitute of unknown composition is "just as good" in order that he may make a bigger profit. Just smile and shake your head. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cures liver ills.

PATENTS

USE A PORTABLE BOSS OVEN

With Patented GLASS DOOR

on your stove or range, either oil, gasoline, acetylene, alcohol or gas. No more spoiled bakings or worry—No more wasted heat—No more jarring or chilling of oven. Housewives can see their baking without opening door. Economy and convenience both guaranteed in the BOSS—a polished lined steel oven lined with tin and asbestos.

GLASS in DOOR is guaranteed not to break from heat because it is secured by our patented yielding pressure retaining strips, which permit expansion and contraction. Glass door fits snugly in one place behind front, and is held tightly in place with two turnbuckles, preventing escape of heat.

Baking qualities and ventilation superior to any other oven or range. All heat goes right into the open bottom, and is perfectly distributed to all parts of the oven by means of our patented Heat Deflector. Flame always visible through small mica windows. With the BOSS a baking costs less than a cent. It will many times over pay for itself in saved bakings to say nothing of saved fuel.

Ask YOUR Dealer to show you the BOSS Glass Door Oven. INSIST upon seeing the name "BOSS" stamped in the front of Oven. Then you know that it is genuine and guaranteed.
